ABOUT TOOTING OUR HORNS

A BROTHER editor, talking to us the other day, told us that we did not toot our own horn enough. He said that the public, especially the advertising merchant liked to see in the local paper many editorials on the subject of trade-at-home, that it would be to our own interest to brag a little more and to cry out, always, and regularly how good The Echo is, as a reading journal and as an advertising medium.

We are inclined to think that perhaps our friend may be right, but, as always, there are two sides to every question. The people of Bay St. Louis know how good a paper this is. The merchants know that advertising in our columns pays. The citizens in Bay St. Louis have known for a long time that we believe in trading at home, where the dollars will circulate among us all, and finally come back home to roost.

There is such a thing as doing too much horn-blowing. There is such a thing as a newspaper making a monkey out of itself in always talking about itself, or in persistently, parrot-like repeating, "trade at home." The job is not performed when The Echo prints something on the subject. There are many people who become suspicious when the obvious is monotonously repeated. The building up of the trade in this community is dependent upon co-operative work on the part of merchants, buyers and the press. Let us all do our part, conscientiously and with set purpose, and, in good time, even the doubters will begin to think and see where the land lies.

PRESS CAN CRITICIZE COURTS

THE right of newspapers to comment upon and criticize the action, opinions and judgments of courts, has been upheld by the Supreme Court of Indiana in reversing the conviction of an editor for "indirect contempt of court."

It seems that Don M. Nixon, now deceased, trenchantly assailed the appointment of a receiver for a bank while editing his newspaper, alleging that the judge had "insulted" the depositors in permitting an attorney to dictate the appointment.

The Supreme Court did not, of course, approve his language but it did assert the right of criticism was of "primary importance to the public generally" and "has a salutary effect on courts and judges as well." The opinion pointed out that courts and judges are not, and should not be, above criticism and so long as their functions are not impeded, there is no right to enforce a contempt proceeding.

CIVILIZATION ASTOUNDS CONVICT

PITY poor Benjamin Ulmo, who served a 26-year sentence on Devil's Island, far-famed French penal colony, and undoubtedly yearned in his prison for the opportunity to return to "civilization."

The other day he went back to France and, after a short stay, voluntarily went back to Devil's Island. He was disappointed with what he found and it might interest you to know what this ex-convict thought about the modern world.

He was "struck" most with "the extraordinary spirited collapse of the world and the decline in conscience and intelligence." That's hard criticism, coming from a convict. He was less impressed with "material progress" and the lowering of moral standards but astounded at the "immeasurable stupidity" of present-day humanity which regards itself as "so superior."

Readers of The Echo might think this over. It is possible that the man from Devil's Island is near the truth?

UNIVERSALLY TRUE

IF THERE is a reader of The Sea Coast Echo who still believes that advertising is useless we invite attention to the things purchased by the non-believer. If this person will take an inventory of the articles bought by himself he will be surprised to find how many of them are "advertised" goods.

One of the beauties about some laws is that they work universally. For example, twelve inches make a foot in small communities as well as in large cities. Correct advertising pays profits, also, in both locales. The mediums are different but results follow judicious advertising in Bay St. Louis as well as in New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

BOOKS AND BOOBS

THERE are some families in Hancock county where no books, except school books, arrive. Do the parents appreciate the value of books?

The question is answered before it is asked. Every family in Hancock county should see that the children are encouraged to read. Rather than reading becoming less important with the more complex organization of society it is becoming more important than ever.

This is the day of specialists but nobody can do a man's thinking for him. The fact there are so many willing to let others think for them explains why the American people lose millions of dollars every year through get-rich-quick schemes.

LOOK OUT FOR CANCER

THE enormous death toll each year from cancer makes it a suffering and sorrow. There are people here who are suffering from cancer and they are not knowing it.

What we want to know about cancer is most of the subject. There are many cancers coming from one source, or from various causes, and it is not always known. About all that can be said is that, in some cases, prompt and early treatment produces encouraging responses and very often completely eliminates the disease.

Cancers are of three kinds, carcinoma is the most common, occurring in the skin, stomach, etc. It develops without pain and may not be noticed until it is late, at the beginning, there is no growth and the spread of the tumor is through the glands. The thing to do, in this case, is to be examined upon slightest suspicion. Operations, we understand, are often effective.

Sarcoma, the second type, arises after an injury has affected some bone or other part of the body. It may attack children and develops rapidly through the introduction of a part of the cancer in the blood stream. It promptly corrected by surgical treatment there is an excellent chance of complete recovery, but delay is fatal, as this type completes its course in a few months.

Epithelioma is a benign type of skin cancer, very benign, and apparently so trifling that the patient hardly ever thinks it worth while to see a physician about the "little" mole, wart or pimple. It occurs most commonly among older people and, if neglected, processes to ulceration although the patient may live for many years without apparent diminution of health.

We go into these matters in order to emphasize to all readers of the Sea Coast Echo the danger of allowing any growth to idly exist unchecked. It is vitally important, in cases of cancer, to secure prompt attention. To be diligent about this matter may save your life or that of someone you love.

"IF EVER I'M TEMPTED"

WE pause long enough to report that Richard Henschen, 24, of Chicago, wants to be finger-printed by the Department of Justice and have his identifying prints on file.

This young man very sensibly observes that "if ever I'm tempted to commit a crime, having my finger prints on record may deter me."

The chances are that Richard will not commit any crime because a young man who is so clear-headed in fortifying himself against yielding to sudden temptations is not apt to go wrong. He is wise in putting the odds against committing a successful crime because it does not pay and the psychological influence of the recorded fingerprints will help him to "go straight."

It might be wise for some of the rest of us to follow his example and set up defensive works against the assaults of various types of temptation that constantly assail us. How much wiser we would be if we followed this example in whatever way might benefit and assist us in doing what most people want to do, "live right."

DO YOU BELIEVE THEM?

AGE-OLD health axioms circulate throughout and there are those who swear by them just as they cherish magic formulas to cure many diseases.

Gradually, however, doctors and scientists are exploding some of these beliefs, although it would not be safe to say that all of them are without value. However, just for the fun of letting you check-up on your own ideas, do you think:

That a persistent cough develops tuberculosis, that one gets warts from toads, that eating seed-containing fruit causes appendicitis, that you should not go to sleep on a big meal, that light hurts your eyes when you have a cold or that removing a splinter with a pin will cause blood-poisoning?

Now, before reading any further checkup on your opinions. How many of the things listed above fit in with your own belief? Well, the answer to all of them, according to Dr. J. C. Geiger, health director of San Francisco, is a vigorous negative.

NATION'S HEALTH IMPROVES

THE health of the nation has not suffered during the depression, according to the Public Health Service, which credits this to the work of relief agencies and the absence of any widespread epidemic.

Figures released for the calendar year of 1933 show the lowest death rate ever recorded in the United States, 10.5 per cent per 1,000 population. Three new lows were recorded for tuberculosis, typhoid, and diphtheria and only 40 deaths resulted from 7,000 cases of smallpox.

This is good news to most of us. It indicates the possibility of further advance along this line and may mean two or three years additional life to those who read this article. The fight on disease can be carried on in Hancock county without regard to what other sections of the nation decide to do and it might be well for us to see that effective work is continued here.

ADVERTISING GAINS

ADVERTISING showed distinct gains in 1934, says Printers' Ink, which reports a 16 per cent gain over 1933.

This will be good news to publishers everywhere. Moreover, it indicates that business is better. Regardless of theory advertisers spend their money when the public is buying, and when advertising budgets move upward it is a sure indication that buying is increasing. The publication estimates that $700,000,000 was expended for advertising in 1934, with newspaper advertising accounting for more than $500,000,000.

THEORETICAL

By GEORGE E. SCHILLING

WAGES—THE OTHER SIDE.

BUSINESS is fighting valiantly to reduce wages, because wages are undoubtedly expensive. Business, from its position, can see only one side of the shield, and is willing to battle to the death for its contention that the whole of it is of the same material.

There is another side, however. Wages are not only expensive, they are also buying power. When workers get such high wages that they can buy silk shirts then the silk business is certain to boom, and other businesses along with it. The man, or woman, who works for wages, or for a small salary, almost invariably spends all, or nearly all, of his pay on food, clothing, amusements and such comforts and luxuries as the income will cover. The more business pays in wages the more buying there will be. The lower wages are, the less buying and the less business there will be. As our good conservative friends used to point out to us, the interest and the profits of the very rich are largely saved; but the wages and salaries of the poor are spent for consumption of goods. Spending creates business, so the more we save the less business we shall have.

The knight who champions this extraordinary point of view has no great reputation, not a single million dollars of his own and very little company, yet he seems to be well armed with facts and to be putting up a very good fight against his bigger opponent. The best thing that is said of him is that he is an impractical theorist, and crazy as Don Quixote. You have to look into certain universities, and into the studies of a few writers of books to find where he came from. The labor unions are always fighting for higher wages, and they are highly practical organizations, but they are not interested in gold and silver shields and points of view. What they want is more pay. Henry Ford, who is also practical, argues that a workman cannot buy a Ford car unless he earns enough money to pay for it, and seems to practice what he preaches. General Hugh Johnson, the recent head of the NRA, evidently sees both sides of the shield, for he told about it in a recent issue of a popular magazine.

The champion of "the economy of high wages" insists that his point of view affects the farm problem, although neither the farmer himself, nor the government at Washington, sympathize with any such foolishness. He says that the eighty per cent of the people who earn wages and small salaries in the cities eat more than the twenty per cent whose income is from other resources, or that they will eat more food if they can afford it. The smaller number may eat finer and spend a larger proportion of his pay for food, but less actual money. On the other hand, when wages are higher he buys more expensive food. One of these wavy charts, which are so popular and useful nowadays, discloses the natural fact that industrial payrolls and farm incomes go up and down together.

Of course the same law works in regard to manufactured goods and to products of modern civilization. The man who earns thirty dollars a week creates more business than the man who earns only five dollars. These great business geniuses of ours who are paid salaries of fifty thousand dollars a year and up (we were just going to write "earn") do not know that yet, so they are using up their genius in trying desperately to build up their businesses while reducing the buying power of their customers.

The shield has two sides. Wages are expensive on one side and buying power on the other. No individual or company, not even any one industry, can reconcile these two sides. The employer who pays more than the market for labor is going to cease being an employer. The industry which pays too high wages is going to increase its costs and, if it raises prices, will lose part of its market. But if every individual tries to reduce his costs by cutting wages and salaries, then industry as a whole is going to lose a large part of its market anyway. The prospect is not very certain.

The theorist says that wages have got to be raised, not by individual effort, which is impossible, but by the combined effort of the whole country. Stuart Chase, who knows what he is talking about as well as any economist, including those in the brain trust, says that if wages are not raised, but are allowed to take their natural course downward, we shall go back, not a few years, but a full century. He insists that there is no intermediate stopping place. The federal government has fixed a minimum wage of 12¢ an hour in Louisiana. The "Iron Law of Wages" should make this a normal rate of pay for ordinary labor throughout the country under a system of competitive economy.

On the other hand, Stuart Chase is not a pessimist, but an optimist. He remarks that Pharaoh did not call the Nile what to do, but the Nile told Pharaoh. He believes that it will be impractical to dam up the potential flood of goods of all kinds that is ready to inundate this whole country as soon as we are willing to release it. Indeed he seems to think that it will break through any artificial barriers that we have erected, and may erect. We do need to see both sides of the shield, and to use the new knowledge.

CAPITOL ACTIVITIES

(By Walker Wood, Secretary of State)

HON. L. A. (IKE) OLSON, Mississippi director of extension for the past four years, was appointed last week as Southwestern Supervisor of Rural Rehabilitation, effective January 15th. Mr. Olson tendered his resignation as Extension Director effective on the same date.

The Board of University and Colleges at its meeting on Friday of this week, is expected to name Mr. Olson's successor. Olson has numerous friends all over the State who are delighted at his promotion and feel that he is thoroughly qualified to fill the position to which he was appointed.

The business of Secretary of State Walker Wood's department for 1935 has started off with a bang. That official's semi-monthly report to the State Treasurer included for the first fifteen days of the year, 31 charters of incorporation, both domestic and foreign, with a total authorized capitalization of $4,871,500.00. Thirty notary public fees were also included in this half-month's report.

Mississippi Conservationists are eagerly anticipating early action on the part of those responsible for surveying and establishing the state system of parks and refuges. It is held that now is a most propitious time to look after this work, while the state holds title to large tracts of land suitable for such purposes, and while assistance from ERA and CCC camps are still available.

The Mississippi Council for Roadside Beautification held a most interesting meeting in Jackson Thursday of this week, with Mrs. Paul Gamble of Greenville, chairman of the council, presiding. Speakers included on the program were Fred B. Merrill, Forestry Director; Mrs. G. H. Reeves of Jackson; Ben Davis, Meridian; Mrs. E. W. Trout, Texarkana, Ark.; Mrs. Edith Wyatt Moore, Natchez; Mrs. Lyon Childress, Nashville; Mrs. Will Neill, Carrollton; and G. A. Draper, State Highway Commissioner.

The 117th annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Mississippi Free and Accepted Masons is scheduled to be held in Meridian February 12-13 at the Shrine Temple. The program for this occasion includes addresses to be made by Hon. Tom C. Ellis, supreme court clerk, and Hon. George D. Riley, insurance commissioner. Both of these gentlemen are past grand masters.

A regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Institutions of Higher Learning will be held in the Governor's office on Friday of this week, January 25th. At this meeting the matter of selecting executives of the six institutions of higher learning will be disposed of. The Board will also receive reports of the affairs and progress of each of the institutions during the present school year. This will not be an annual report, but simply a report for the year, thus far.

Another major item of business of the Board at this meeting, will be the receipt of reports from the various building committees. The University Building Committee will report on the expenditure of the legislative appropriation of $75,000 for housing and equipping the medical school, and also the committee charged with making improvements on the University power plant, for which $65,000 was appropriated.

Executive Secretary W. H. Smith of the Board states that repairs made at the University and colleges have saved to the state hundreds of thousands of dollars, in prolonging the life and usefulness of the buildings at each institution.

WITH THE PRESS

SENSIBLE BEST-SELLERS

(Jackson Daily News)

IT IS reassuring, to those who worry about the state of the American intellect, to learn that the ten most popular books in America during the year 1934 have been:

"Anthony Adverse," by Harvey Allen.
"One Hundred Million Guinea Pigs," by Hallett.
"Goodbye Mr. Chips," by Hilton.
"Life Begins at Forty," by Pitkin.
"Testament of Youth," by Britten.
"So Red The Rose," by Wolcott.
"I Went to Pitt College," by Gilfillan.
"Nijinsky," by Nijinsky.
"Economy of Abundance," by Chase.

Only three of these, the first, third and sixth, are in reality novels. The others are mostly historical or biographical. Obviously the appeal of fiction, even for mystery tales, is passing. Serious books are demanded more and more. People want instruction and thought more than mere amusement. Literary taste is rising, too.

SHIP ISLAND AND FORT HAS HISTORY THAT DATES FAR BACK

Discovered by the French 1699—Fort and Site of War Prison Notably

BY JOHN H. LANG, Pass Christian

Ship Island: one of the chain of islands that separate the Mississippi Sound from the Gulf of Mexico, is twelve miles south of the main shore, opposite Gulfport. It was first discovered, so far as we know, by the French in 1699, when they came through the Ship Island Pass on to the main shore; landing at what is now Biloxi. It is supposed that they left their larger vessels in the deep water and called it "Ship Island" (the island where the ships were).

We don't know much about it until the War between the States opened up. At that time there was a fort of some kind on the West End, that was held by the United States, for on the coast of Mississippi, this old fort was immediately taken over by the C. S. A. and a small battery of troops put in charge. When the Yankees began to threaten this section, the Confederates soon saw that they could not hold it, so they evacuated the island, blew up the fort. I was a boy seven and a half years old, stood on the beach at the old Barnes Hotel, at Mississippi City and saw the smoke of the burning fort and buildings. The Yankees, Admiral Farragut's fleet, and the transports with Butler's Army, soon came and took charge, assembling the troops consisting of fifteen regiments from the North Eastern States and Farragut's Fleet, for the attack on New Orleans.

When New Orleans was captured the troops were moved elsewhere and the island was used as a prison camp for the confederate prisoners.

I have a map sketched from the then situation showing that the area of the West End of the island was several times larger than it is now. The present Fort "Massachusetts" was built at a later date and was not completed until 1872. At that time the island was evacuated by C. S. A., the timber was covering the lands to within two miles of the present fort and of the land or sands were hundreds of feet, South, West and North of the fort. The Yanks cut the timber for fuel and various uses causing the winds and storms to carry the sands away. The island has been cut away so badly that the fort is now in the water! The old lighthouse was undermined to such an extent that new tower had to be built.

All the building gradually disappeared from decay and water incursions, so that for years there was only the old fort, keeper's house and lighthouse left. During the existence of yellow fever, the USM Health Department had a sub-quarantine station near the old fort and lighthouse, the main station being at Chandelier Island. Later Chandelier was abandoned and east end of Ship Island utilized, where it still exists.

Capt. Tom Clarrie of Gulfport, retired lighthouse keeper, has some letters and a sketched map of the island in 1862, sent him by a soldier who was a member of a Maine regiment of the many stationed there in 1862. He described a tropical storm that occurred at the time. Says five men were killed, the water swept across the island, and his people had to stand all night to hold down their tents. There are names of fifteen regiments, two batteries, mostly from the north eastern states.

When the troops were sent elsewhere, the island was used as a military prison. This man says he was one of the guards, so you can see he states facts.

NEW ORLEANS FIRST CARNIVAL YEAR 1827 INTERESTING EVENT

THE FIRST RECORD of the celebration of Mardi Gras is dated 1827 over 100 years ago after the founding of the city. The first celebration was not anything like the elaborate art creations that characterize the event now. It was a simple procession of maskers.

The procession of maskers, which takes place in dozens of different sections of the city at the same time now, and which are only one of many phases of the New Orleans Carnival today, probably very closely resemble the original procession.

The next stage in the evolution of festivities as we know them today came 10 years later, when in 1837 the first semblance of a peripatetic tableau was given. The idea is understood to have come from a Carnival organization in Mobile, bearing a quaint name of "The Cowbellians," who started in 1831.

Nothing much is known about the first real Mardi Gras parade, but the French side of "The Bee" tells us that the second, in 1839, had as its dominant figure an immense rooster, six feet high, which rode in a vehicle, and whose stentorian crow, accompanied by the flapping of its great wings, elicited boisterous cheers from the witnessing throngs.

We mustn't forget that at his time New Orleans was recognized as the wealthiest city in America and a leading center of art. It was third in population and rivaled New York as a port. Its setback came with the Civil War, and it is only in the last generation that New Orleans has once more hit its stride—a pace that today is sending it ahead of other American cities in development and enabling it to become once more a rival of New York for port honors.

So it is likely that the pre-Lenten festivities of these early days were very sumptuous and beautiful affairs. We know from the contemporary chronicles that they made New Orleans a mecca for winter tourists, and even in those days the city was crowded with visitors who came by stagecoach, the "new-fangled steamboats," and on horseback.

Professor Diggs—"Dear me! Did I go in the car when I started out?"

Professor Diggs—"Ah, yes, I remember now. After I got out I turned to thank the gentleman who gave me a lift, and it seemed quite strange that he had disappeared so quickly."

ALL AMERICA TO UNITE HONORING THE PRESIDENT ON BIRTHDAY, JANUARY 30

With costumes designed to symbolize the theme, America will be presented from the Atlantic to the Pacific and the Lakes to the Rio Grande. Florida and California orange groves, Oregon apple orchards, Georgia peaches, the corn and wheat belts of the midwest, cotton fields, tobacco, copper and iron, gold and silver and oil, will be among the nation's resources depicted.

Colors Named

Silver and bluebird blue have been named as the official colors for the Waldorf Ball as well as for more than 5,600 others which will be held throughout the nation on the same night.

While these two great population centers are organizing to make their celebration unequalled in size, other communities from coast to coast vie for honors with elaborate plans. Wilbur Cross, governor of Connecticut, is chairman of the ball in Hartford, while in Columbus, O., the newly-elected Governor, Martin L. Davey, will hold his inaugural ball to honor the President and raise funds to fight infantile paralysis.

Scores of other governors and hundreds of mayors are actively interested in the affairs which will be given in their states and cities. National headquarters, through General Director Carl Byoir, reports that practically all official Washington will attend the affair in the Capital, which is under the chairmanship of Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson. It is anticipated that every state, local and national figure will be present at one or another of the affairs when they reach their climax with the President's address, which will be broadcast over the largest hook-up in radio history.

Unlike the national Birthday Ball for the President last year, proceeds from the 1935 affair will not go to the Warm Springs Foundation. Seventy cents of every dollar will be used by the community raising the money for rehabilitating local infantile paralysis victims. The remaining thirty percent will be given to President Roosevelt, who will turn it over to the President's Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research, under the chairmanship of Col. Henry L. Doherty.

In Bay St. Louis

Bay St. Louis, patriotic and humane too, will have its President's Ball on the birthday date of January 30—next Wednesday, at Uncle Charlie's Night Club. Admission 75 cents for gentlemen and 25 cents for ladies. The affair will be worthy of your presence.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

By a Boy Scout

At a meeting held January 16, we had present Father Peter Quinn, of Vicksburg, who, by the way, is the director of the Boy Scouts of Mississippi. His brother Father Quinn of Biloxi, formerly at the Church of Our Lady of the Gulf; Father Moran, Father Gmelch and Mr. A. G. Favre of Bay St. Louis, as guests. Father Quinn of Vicksburg, spoke on Scouting and the Scout Convention in Washington, D. C., in August, 1935.

Father Quinn is taking a delegation of boys from various Catholic troops of Mississippi and said he would take a boy or two, who could afford the trip, with him from Troop 217.

We are thinking of forming a basketball team in the troop of the best players.

ROBERT P. HYAMS, SR., BUSINESS LEADER AND PHILANTHROPIST DIES

At New Orleans Home—Was Local Summer Resident For Many Years—Aged 60.

Robert P. Hyams, 60 years old, 5414 St. Charles avenue, New Orleans business executive, philanthropist and civic leader, died at his home Saturday morning at 8:35 a. m., following an illness of several weeks. Mr. Hyams had passed the crisis of a severe illness of pneumonia and it was with thorough feeling of satisfaction to learn he was convalescent. However, his condition took a sudden turn and after a few days he died from Angina Pectoris.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at 2 p. m. from his late residence with interment in Metairie cemetery.

Mr. Hyams is survived by his wife, the former Miss Laura Rollins of New Orleans; three children, Robert P. Hyams, Jr., Mrs. Lollie Hyams Janin, Mrs. S. Jaubert Fucich, and one sister, Mrs. Nellis Hyams Cooper. Three grandchildren also survive.

Born in Shreveport, La., in 1874, Mr. Hyams came to New Orleans after the age of 14. He had attended a military school in his native city, but completed his education at the old Tulane High School. He started business as a clerk but soon organized the Robert P. Hyams Coal Company of which he was the president at the time of his death.

Other business enterprises of which Mr. Hyams was president were the Gulf Barge and Towing Company, Inc., the Republic Ice Company and the Arctic Pure Ice Company.

Always active in charities and philanthropic work, Mr. Hyams was president of the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and president of the New Orleans Convalescent Home. He was a member of the advisory council for St. Anna's home and a member of the Board of elders for the Westminster church.

Mr. Hyams was president of the New Orleans Depositors' Association Inc.

Mr. Hyams preferred to assist the needy in his own private manner and a list of his charities was never made public. His philanthropic work extended beyond the city limits.

Although Presbyterian, while residing here during the period between early spring and late fall, he worshipped at the First Methodist church, Bay St. Louis, and was an outstanding benefactor of that church. His contributions and gifts were many, but always without ostentation and according to his expressed desire, never made known.

Mr. Hyams was well known locally for his charities and other contributions to the public benefit. Personally he was likable and held in highest esteem by all who knew him.

He helped to found the old Presbyterian hospital, of which he was vice-president and treasurer until its dissolution in 1929.

He gave freely to needy causes and deserving individuals. He gave so secretly that not even members of his family knew the total and distribution of his charities. He was a retiring man, avoiding the limelight always sidestepping, publicity and running away—almost literally—from expressions of thanks.

Funeral Sunday afternoon was largely attended. Many friends from Bay St. Louis journeyed to New Orleans to be present at the last rites and to sympathize with the family.

NOTICE TO WATER CONSUMERS

Due to low level of water in one of the city's reservoirs, Commissioner H. Grady Perkins asks that open faucets be closed and in order water may accumulate and the supply be not impaired. However, the tower and main reservoir are kept filled in case of fire emergency. If you must leave hydrants open, says Commissioner Perkins, do not let them wide open. Better, however, to close all faucets, especially since probability of further freeze is no more.

LAST RITES FOR MRS. B. R. ENGMAN AT NEW ORLEANS FRIDAY P. M.

Rabbi Louis Binstock Conducts Ceremony—Interment at Hebrew Cemetery

Last rites for Mrs. B. R. Engman, wife of R. C. Engman, whose passing away was recorded in these columns last Friday morning, took place in New Orleans that same afternoon from the parlors of Tharp-Sonthheimer Funeral Home.

Remains were shipped by train to that city Friday morning, accompanied by many friends and acquaintances of the family and at once taken to the funeral home, where friends of that city viewed the remains and attended the final ceremony that afternoon.

Rabbi Binstock, eminent representative of his church and one of New Orleans' leading citizens, beloved by all creeds, delivered the eulogy, paying deserved tribute to the well-known character of Mrs. Engman. Rabbi Binstock's words were most fitting aside from the eloquence of this eminent churchman and speaker.

A large number of friends and others followed the funeral procession to the last place of consignment at Hebrew Rest cemetery, in Gentilly, where the resting place was marked with a wealth of flowers, silent but beautiful and eloquent expressions of love and sympathy. Flowers were not only in abundance but noted for variety and rare beauty.

Pall bearers at New Orleans were, David M. Davis, James Villars, Milton Gasper, Coburn Weston, Randolph Ladner.

In addition to the extraordinary number of floral offerings many telegraphic and other messages of sympathy and sorrow were received from many and varied points of the country. Mrs. Engman was widely known. Her friends were from all sections and the flash of the news of her passing away was cause for sadness. A most extraordinary woman, one who lived by the side of the road, who saw men and women come and go in the daily life, and shared with their joys and sorrows, ever conscious of the golden rule and lived her life in the most humane possible.

CARD OF THANKS

The countless ministrations, consideration and messages of condolence, flowers, etc. are manifestations of love and sincerity for which we are thankful and grateful.

Gratefully acknowledged,

THE ENGMAN FAMILY.

GAY MARDI GRAS PLANNED IN NEW 'LEANS FOR SEASON AT HAND.

GAY social New Orleans is busy in the whirl of festivity preceding its century-old celebration of Mardi Gras on March 5.

Carpenters, painters, and designers who have worked all year were busy putting the finishing touches on glittering floats which will be dazle spectators in carefree parades during the few days preceding Mardi Gras.

Debutantes have been rushing hither and thither to cocktail parties, dances, luncheons and dinners ever since the carnival season was ushered in January 5 with the ultra-exclusive Twelfth Night Ball (twelfth night after Christmas.)

The ball of the Olympians January 19th ushered in a long list of formal balls, each with its own court. Mythology has supplied a host of names for them.

The final week before Mardi Gras will find the city in a frenzy of excitement. There will be balls every night. Oberon, Atlantians, Krewe of Mystery, Knights of Momus, Krewe of Apollo, Mystic Club and Krewe of Proteus will be hosts. Festivities will be climaxed by the brilliant costume affairs of Rex (King of Carnivals) Comus and Druids carnival night.

Invitations are issued only to selected and approved lists, but this year there will be one ball for "everybody."

Mrs. William F. Burge, Jr., president of the Junior League, announced yesterday that a public ball would be held at the Municipal Auditorium on March 1. Proceeds from the sale of tickets will be given to the Junior League Nutrition Center.

HONORING VISITOR FROM COLUMBUS, MISS.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Scharff were host and hostess Tuesday evening at their home in Carroll avenue to a bridge party of four tables honoring Mrs. Mellie Durrett, Columbus, Miss., who is here on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Norton Haas, and family.

The extreme cold and snowfall of the evening did not deter the guests from arriving at the appointed time nor 'chill' the beautiful and interesting affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Herlihy and Mr. and Mrs. James Jones captured the high score trophies, while Mrs. W. J. Kidd won the low score compensation. Mrs. Durrett received a pretty and useful gift as the guest prize.

Shortly before midnight a plate supper was served. The affair proved one of much pleasure and genuine enjoyment.

THE ECHO'S COOKING CLASS

To some housekeepers soup is just soup. To others it is actually one of the most important of all foods. It certainly has a vital place in the diet of the old and young. Make your soups more appetizing by using attractive garnishes and accompaniments.

Vegetable Soup

2 lbs. soup bone of beef
1 tablespoon salt
2 quarts cold water
2 teaspoons sugar
1 cup tomatoes
Pepper to taste
½ cup cabbage
1 carrot
1 turnip
Onion and parsley to taste

Prepare soup bone, add cold water and salt. Put on fire and let liquid come gradually to boiling point. Simmer for two hours, add vegetables and let simmer gently for 1 hour. Serve with buttered strips of toast.

Italian Onion Soup

Slice 2 medium sized Bermuda onions and saute them to a rich

Bean Soup

1 cup dry beans
½ lb. boiling meat
2 quarts water
1 quart milk
1 slice onion
1 carrot
2 stalks celery
Pepper and salt to taste.

Wash and soak beans over night. Boil meat with vegetables in the water until tender, remove, add beans and cook until all to pieces. Run through a strainer. Cut meat into tiny pieces, add to bean pulp, put in hot milk. Season and serve hot.

Cream of Tomato Soup

2 cups of canned tomatoes
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup water
1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons flour with enough milk to make a smooth paste
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon catsup
1 quart milk

Heat the tomatoes and water. Add soda. Blend flour, add butter, salt pepper and catsup. Add hot milk to tomatoes (pour slowly) add paste and stir constantly until soup thickens. Serve very hot with crackers.

Miniature Meat Dumplings

Chop fine enough meat or chicken to make ½ cup, beat in 2 eggs, ½ cup bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, salt, pepper and paprika to taste and a dash of mace. Add a teaspoon of melted butter. Make into tiny balls and set away to become firm. Drop into boiling soup, cover, cook ten minutes.

CROUTONS

Cut slices of stale bread into very small cubes. Fry in deep fat until a golden brown.

Deviled Crackers

Split hard round crackers and soak them for 5 minutes in ice water. Brush them with melted butter, sprinkle with paprika and a little grated cheese. Toast in a hot oven until brown and puffy. Serve with creamed soup.
